NOTES.

(These are substantially as Mr. Stent wrote them.)

1. chao<sup>1</sup>-ch'in<sup>1</sup> 招親. This more particularly applies to the imperial family; the people generally use 招婿, 招女婿. A person having no male children, and not wishing his family name to become extinct, can, if he choose, invite a person to marry his daughter, which he does through the medium of the go-between. On marriage the bridegroom becomes a member of his father-in-law's family, the first son assumes his mother's maiden name, and inherits the family property, his descendants doing the same in perpetuity; the remainder of the bridegroom's children retain his name. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. I., p. 99. (招駙馬 of Imperial family).
2. chao<sup>1</sup>-hui<sup>2</sup> 招魂. In China when a relative dies at a distance from home, the night the report of his death arrives, the family of the deceased hang up his portrait, and place before it a table with two lighted candles, and four or eight dishes of eatables on it; incense is burnt; the name of the deceased, with the dates of his birth and death, is written on a piece of silk or paper and pasted on a board; two, sometimes four, Buddhist or Taoist priests then invoke Tsao<sup>1</sup>-chün<sup>1</sup> 灶君, the god of the cooking-stoves, and call on the spirit of the deceased to return home. A day is appointed for the assembly of relatives, who live at a distance, to perform the ceremony of mourning; after this the females of his family mourn daily before the portrait; three meals are also spread daily as if he were still living, and paper money burnt nightly; this is continued according to the circumstances of the family, sometimes for a period of three years, if the deceased was wealthy and had children.
3. chi<sup>1</sup>-yüan<sup>1</sup> 擊冤 also 喊冤 han<sup>2</sup> yüan<sup>1</sup>. In ancient times every magistrate's yamên had a drum attached to it, placed at the entrance to the justice hall; a person suffering injustice from the hands of those more powerful than himself, could beat this drum to call attention to his grievance, and the magistrate was bound to listen to his complaint; at present, although the drums remain, they are seldom used.
4. chi<sup>1</sup> 乩. This mode of divination is very common; a tray is covered with fine sand and placed upon a table, a wooden pointed pen is suspended above it; the gods are invoked, and the pen influenced by them, and guided by the hands of two ignorant persons, is supposed to write obscure words on the sand, which the diviners translate to the best of their ability. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. II., p. 112. (Also 扶鸞 fu<sup>2</sup>-luan<sup>2</sup>.)
5. ch'i<sup>1</sup>-chêng<sup>4</sup> 七政. The five planets are 金, 木, 水, 火 and 土; Venus, Jupiter, Saturn, Mars, and Mercury. These, with 日 月 sun and moon, are so called: the seven regulators. The same characters also represent the five elements, metal, wood, water, fire, and earth.
6. ch'i<sup>1</sup>-yüeh<sup>4</sup>-ch'i<sup>1</sup> 七月七. "The two stars: Capricorn (Niu<sup>2</sup>-Lang<sup>2</sup> 牛郎) and Lyra (Chih<sup>1</sup>-Nü<sup>2</sup> 織女), are the patrons (lit. progenitors) of agriculture and weaving. The ancients say they were once man and wife, but in process of time they were separated by the River of Heaven (the Milky Way). On one night in the year only, the 7th of the 7th moon, the magpies make a bridge of their bodies, over which they bring them together. Hence the saying that on the 7th of the 7th moon Niu Lang has an interview with Chih Nü."
7. chiao<sup>1</sup>-t'u<sup>2</sup>-san<sup>1</sup>-hsüeh<sup>4</sup> 狡兔三穴. Lit. the artful hare with three holes, i. e., means of escape.

8. chiao<sup>4</sup>-hun<sup>2</sup> 叫魂. The spirit of a child, or full grown person, when insensible from syncope or any other cause, is supposed to be lost. In a case of "calling for the spirit," magicians are sent for, sacrifices are offered, and paper money is burnt; the god of the kitchen, 灶君, and the spirits of the patient's ancestors are invoked to bring it back; a passport, and forty-nine printed horses have been previously procured "to assist the spirit on its journey back." One man calls out in a loud voice, "———, come home!" Another replies, "yes;" this is repeated forty-nine times, incense is then burnt, and by this means the spirit is supposed to be safely returned to the body.
9. chieh<sup>4</sup>-tao<sup>1</sup>-sha<sup>1</sup>-jên<sup>2</sup> 借刀殺人. Lit. to borrow a knife to kill a person. To make a tool of one.
10. chien<sup>1</sup>-chên<sup>2</sup> 諫臣, or chien<sup>4</sup>-kuan<sup>1</sup> 諫官. These titles, although often met with in novels, etc., are now obsolete, and the more modern title of yü<sup>4</sup>-shih<sup>4</sup> 御史, or tn<sup>1</sup>-lao<sup>3</sup>-yeh<sup>2</sup> 都老爺, censor, is now used.
11. ch'ien<sup>1</sup>-yü<sup>3</sup> 籤語. A person having a doubtful case which he cannot settle satisfactorily, goes to the temple of some favourite god to ch'iu<sup>2</sup>-ch'ien<sup>1</sup> 求籤, divine, by drawing slips of wood; some twenty or thirty of these slips are held in a case, numbered, candles are lighted, and incense burnt before the god; after prostrating himself he draws a slip out of the case, or as is often done, shakes the case till one falls out, and the priest gives the "answer," generally in verse, on a slip of paper, numbered to tally with the slip just drawn. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. II., p. 109.
12. chih<sup>1</sup>-tao<sup>4</sup>-liao<sup>3</sup> 知道了. Written by the Emperor at the end of any document he has read.
13. chih<sup>3</sup>-chia<sup>3</sup>-ts'ao<sup>3</sup> 指甲草. Lit. finger-nail grass. The red balsam is used greatly for dyeing the nails of fingers or toes, hence the name. The mode is this: pluck the flowers, put them in a cup, beat them to a pulp, and put a little alum to it; then scrape the backs of the nails and place a portion of the pulp on each; in a short time the colour will have penetrated, and the dye will last two or three months.
14. ch'in<sup>1</sup>-tz'ü<sup>3</sup> 欽此. Written by the Emperor, with the vermilion pencil, at the end of decrees, etc.
15. chin<sup>3</sup>-hsing<sup>2</sup> 九刑. These are—cutting to pieces, beheading, strangling, banishment for ever, banishment for a limited period, torturing, slapping the mouth, and bamboosing. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. I., p. 335.
16. chin<sup>2</sup>-p'in<sup>3</sup> 九品. Each grade consists of two classes. The 1st grade wear the red button; 2nd, the flowered red; 3rd, the bright blue; 4th, clouded blue; 5th, the crystal; 6th, the clouded white; 7th, 8th, and 9th, gold or brass buttons.
17. chin<sup>2</sup>-tai<sup>4</sup> 九代. These consist of great-great-grandfather, great-grandfather, grandfather, father, self, son, grandson, great-grandson, and great-great-grandson.
18. ch'iu<sup>2</sup>-ssü<sup>4</sup> 求嗣. If an elderly man has no sons, he goes to a temple which contains the goddess 送子觀音 (who is represented with a baby at the breast,) and the eighteen 羅漢; after praying, he takes the cap called 羅漢帽 home, and unknown to any one but his wife, places it under her pillow; by this means he is supposed to attain his wish. Some even make pilgrimages with their wives to the island of P'u<sup>3</sup>-t'o<sup>3</sup> 普陀, near Chusan.
19. chü<sup>1</sup>-shou<sup>2</sup>-hsün<sup>4</sup>-wên<sup>4</sup> 聚首詢問. This also applies to an assemblage of more than two, as at a guild or tea-shop, to enquire the particulars of anything and discuss matters.

20. ch'ü<sup>3</sup>-ch'in<sup>1</sup>-kuo<sup>4</sup>-mên<sup>3</sup> 娶親過門. On the morning of the wedding a procession consisting of musicians, etc., proceeds to the girl's house to receive her; on their return, as soon as they reach the bridegroom's house, the girl's face is covered with a piece of silk; she is conducted into the house, and, in company with her husband, worships heaven, earth, the gods, and their ancestors, and pay their respects to their relatives. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. I., p. 79.
21. ch'un<sup>1</sup>-fên<sup>1</sup> 春分. For the sake of convenience and reference I have arranged a small table with the twenty-four terms and their approximate dates in English and Chinese.

22. erh<sup>3</sup>-pao<sup>1</sup>-rh<sup>2</sup> 耳包兒. These are made of card-board, etc., lined with fur, and are universally worn in the north.
23. fang<sup>1</sup>-shêng<sup>1</sup> 放生. A Chinaman will buy any kind of living creature, such as birds, etc., and let them go; this is considered a meritorious action, and will not fail to be rewarded by heaven.
24. fang<sup>1</sup>-shui<sup>3</sup>-têng<sup>1</sup> 放水燈. This ceremony consists in Buddhist priests floating lighted lanterns on rivers or lakes, to enlighten the darkness of the water world; it is a sacrifice to the spirits of those whose deaths have been occasioned by water, and occurs on the 15th day of the 7th month; it is called the kue<sup>2</sup>-chich<sup>2</sup> 鬼節, "Spirit's Festival." See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. II., p. 104.

25. fəng<sup>1</sup>-shən<sup>3</sup> 封神. There are numerous gods in China who have been made so by Imperial letters patent, as the Fire-god, Water-god, etc., much in the same way as nobility is conferred on persons in our own countries.
26. fu<sup>1</sup>-ch'ang<sup>4</sup>-fu<sup>4</sup>-sui<sup>3</sup> 夫唱婦隨. Lit. the husband sings and the wife accompanies. Conjugal happiness. (Also 琴瑟, ch'in<sup>2</sup>-sé<sup>4</sup>).
27. fu<sup>2</sup>-chung<sup>1</sup>-shəng<sup>1</sup>-tzu<sup>3</sup> 服中生子. If the wife of a mandarin has children while her husband is in mourning for a parent, that is, from ten months after a parent's death to the expiration of the third year's mourning, he is liable to be severely punished by Chinese law. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. II., p. 210.
28. fu<sup>2</sup>-nei<sup>4</sup>-na<sup>4</sup>-ch'ieh<sup>4</sup> 服內納妾. A person of rank for three years after the death of a parent or the Emperor, is not supposed to have sexual intercourse with any woman, not even his wife, or he is liable to punishment by fine, etc.
29. fu<sup>1</sup> 訃. A death-letter. This in ancient times was despatched thirty-five days after death to all friends who should pay a visit for mourning. At present, intimation of death is given as soon as convenient.
30. fu<sup>4</sup>-hsin<sup>1</sup>-tsei<sup>2</sup> 負心賊. This expression is used by girls to those who have jilted them, or been guilty of "breach of promise," etc.
31. hai<sup>3</sup>-shih<sup>4</sup> 海市. A mirage at sea is supposed to be caused by a frog a thousand years old, who descends to the bottom of the sea, and blowing upwards erects houses, cities, etc., which is a sign of the next "sea market," but when one approaches it disappears.
32. hai<sup>4</sup>-yüeh<sup>4</sup> 亥月. This note would more properly have been placed under ti<sup>4</sup>-chih<sup>1</sup> 地支, "earth's branches;" these are twelve in number, and are horary and astronomical characters; each one representing a period of the day, or Chinese hour, and one of the months. Below is a short table showing them in the hours and months, with the synonymous terms in common use, etc.; for their cyclical use in conjunction with t'ien<sup>1</sup>-kan<sup>1</sup> 天干, "heaven's stems," see Note 81.

33. ho<sup>2</sup>-hui<sup>4</sup> 合會. To form a society. There are numerous kinds of societies in China; some of them similar to our benefit societies, and conducted on very philanthropic principles, others again more of a gambling nature. See also "Social Life of the Chiuese," Vol. II., p. 147, 177, 213.
34. ho<sup>2</sup>-k'u<sup>3</sup>-lai<sup>2</sup> 何苦來. How came it so? etc. A person from a distance, tired and thirsty, asked the owner of a well for a drink of water; the owner about to comply with his request discovered the well dried up and exclaimed 何苦來.
35. hu<sup>3</sup>-chang<sup>3</sup> 虎撐. This is a hollow iron ring filled with small pieces of metal which make a jingling noise when shaken.
36. hu<sup>4</sup>-shên<sup>1</sup>-ching<sup>4</sup> 護身鏡. Lit. "protecting body mirror." This is worn by a bridegroom at the marriage ceremony. Also a kind of breast-plate.
37. hu<sup>4</sup>-shên<sup>1</sup>-fu<sup>2</sup> 護身符. Lit. "protecting body charm." This is a charm generally written by a Taoist priest; when worn on the body no evil spirit is supposed to be able to harm the wearer. In the common language the term is used for a passport.
38. huai<sup>3</sup> 槐. This is a very beautiful overspreading tree, the yellow blossoms of which are used as a dye, and the seed, which remains on the tree till the next year's blossoms appear, is used largely by the Chinese in the north for the cure of the piles; a decoction is made similar to tea, and the patient takes three or four drinks daily; this remedy is said to be very efficacious.
39. huan<sup>1</sup> 獾 or 獾. This character in all the Chinese, or Anglo-Chinese Dictionaries I have met has been represented as either being, or resembling the bear, the wild boar, the dog, wolf, etc. While in Peking a few years ago I made enquiries about it and could get no clearer definition; it was well known, however, and to be procured, so, feeling curious to see this strange animal, I engaged the services of a hunter with instructions to procure one; he returned in a few days with four young ones, which were pronounced at once by competent judges to be veritable badgers. The late Dr. Powles, of the British Legation, purchased them, but the whole of them died within a month: I have, instead of copying vague meanings from other Dictionaries, presumed to give my own.
40. hui<sup>1</sup>-ming<sup>2</sup> 諱名. The posthumous name of an Emperor, and those of Confucius and Mencius were forbidden to appear in official documents or in the compositions of candidates at the literary examinations.
41. hun<sup>1</sup>-p'ei<sup>1</sup> 婚配. Persons owning domestic or other slaves generally mate the female slaves when over sixteen years of age to one of the males; their offspring also becoming slaves. Marriage of free persons also.
42. huo<sup>3</sup>-tsang<sup>4</sup> 火葬. This custom still exists in China, though not to a very great extent, and generally among the poorer classes, as it is not considered respectable to burn one's deceased relatives; there seems no other reason for doing so than poverty, and the saving of trouble and expense. I heard, however, of a case last year in Shanghai where the dying person himself expressed a wish to be burnt after death, which was accordingly done. Lepers and Buddhist priests are generally burnt. The 'huo<sup>3</sup>-chia<sup>1</sup>, 火家, "corpse burners," are looked upon as one of the lowest classes. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. II., p. 244, and Vol. II., p. 257.
43. hsi<sup>1</sup> 羲. This monarch reigned from B. C. 2,903 to B. C. 2,789, a period of one hundred and fifteen years.
44. hsi<sup>3</sup>-ch'ü<sup>3</sup> 襲取. This applies more particularly to an invasion without a declaration of war; troops sent secretly to attack an enemy, to obtain their situation, etc.

45. hsi<sup>3</sup>-tzu<sup>3</sup> 喜子. This kind of spider has a flat black body; when seen in the morning it is considered to be a lucky omen.
46. hsia<sup>1</sup>-k'u<sup>1</sup>-ts'ao<sup>3</sup> 夏枯草. Lit. "summer wither grass." This grass is green in winter, but dies in summer, hence the name; it is used as a medicine, and is said to contain cooling properties; the Chinese make an infusion of it to serve as a drink in hot weather.
47. hsiang<sup>1</sup>-an<sup>4</sup> 香案. Nearly every Chinese house contains an incense table with two candlesticks and censer on it; this is in the middle of a hall on common occasions. On birthdays, wedding days, the receipt of an imperial edict, and on the 1st and 15th of every month the candles are lighted and incense burnt previous to going through the ceremony.
48. hsiang<sup>1</sup>-yo<sup>1</sup> 鄉約. On the 1st and 15th of each month, or on specified days, the inhabitants of a village assemble to listen to the headborough's orders, and to discuss affairs, sometimes to worship in the temple. After their other business is concluded, the "Sacred Edict," is produced, and the headborough reads a few pages, commenting on it as he proceeds. See Note 74.
49. hsiao<sup>1</sup>-niao<sup>3</sup> 梟鳥. This is a fabulous bird, supposed to be beautiful when young, but becoming ugly when it attains full growth; it conveys the idea of ingratitude and undutifulness from being said to eat its own parents.
50. hsiao<sup>3</sup>-tan<sup>4</sup> 小旦. These boys are often used for unnatural purposes, so that any boy used for that purpose is called a hsiao<sup>3</sup>-tan<sup>4</sup>.
51. hsieh<sup>3</sup>-ch'i<sup>4</sup> 邪氣. One very absurd, yet prevalent notion among the Chinese is, that women are often possessed of the 黃鼠狼, a sort of fox or ferret, who causes them to commit all sorts of vagaries, and involves some strange ceremonies to get them "cast out." There is scarcely a Chinese that does not fully believe in this, and foreigners even have been known to do so.
52. hsieh<sup>3</sup>-p'ên<sup>2</sup> 血盆. When a woman feels the pains of labour coming on, the midwife is sent for, and the patient is placed in a sitting posture on a wooden frame over a vessel, and in this unpleasant position gives birth to her child.
53. hsü<sup>1</sup>-shu<sup>1</sup> 鬚梳, or more commonly called 'hu<sup>3</sup>-shu<sup>1</sup> 鬚梳, whisker comb. A person having passed twenty-five years of age, or from twenty-five to forty, calls in the aid of a physiologist, who decides at what age he is to grow moustache; accordingly, a birthday, or lucky day is chosen on which to be shaved for the last time; from this day the moustache is allowed to grow, never more to be shaved. Almost every Chinese who sports a moustache carries the comb suspended from a button or button hole, and will be seen constantly running the comb through it, no matter whether in the streets or elsewhere; an elderly Chinese taking more pride in the few straggling hairs on his upper lip than one of our own young coxcombs would in cultivating the first buddings of an incipient moustache.
54. hsün<sup>4</sup>-tsang<sup>1</sup> 殉葬. The barbarous customs of a wife being buried alive with her deceased husband has long been discontinued. Sutteeism, however, is still carried on to a great extent: wives on the death of their husbands putting an end to themselves by poison, drowning, hanging, etc., often in public; various reasons are assigned for it: love of husband, dread of poverty, neglect or ill-treatment by the husband's family, etc. Articles prized by the deceased when living, are, at his death, often buried with him. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. II., p 108.
55. i<sup>3</sup>-chieh<sup>3</sup> 儀節, or li<sup>3</sup>-shêng<sup>1</sup> 禮生. Generally a hsiu<sup>4</sup>-ts'ai<sup>2</sup> 秀才 appointed by government to give the time for prostrating, etc., when officials worship in Confucian or other temples. With a loud voice he gives the word, kneel, knock head, rise, as the case may be, when the whole as one obey his word of command much in the same way as a squad of recruits would obey the orders of a drill sergeant. Those employed by the people at weddings or funerals are called li-jên 禮人; the one to give the word when the Emperor prostrates in the Temple of Heaven, etc., is called a tsan-li-lang 贊禮郎.

56. jih-shih 日食. The popular notion of an eclipse is, that a wild sun (some say dog) tries to eat the sun; hence the name "sun eating." When an eclipse takes place the mandarins all assemble at the local temples, burn incense and worship, the people beating gongs and firing crackers, etc., to rescue the sun from its danger. See also Wade's "T'ien lei," ss. 90 and 91.

57. kan-lu 甘露. This is supposed to confer immortality to the drinker. "Wu-ti of the Han dynasty, made a bronze statue of a man at Ch'ang-an, two hundred cubits in height, and holding in its hands a golden bowl, in which it was his profane intention to catch the dew of heaven, in order that he might prolong his life by drinking it. The bowl was called ch'eng-lu-chin-pan, "the dew containing bowl of gold."

58. k'eng-t'ieh 庚帖. If a man wishes to marry a girl, he sends a go-between to request her k'eng-t'ieh, or "birthday card;" this contains eight characters, being two characters each, for the year, month, day, and hour of her birth; these are compared with his own by a fortune-teller; if they agree, negotiations can go on, but if not, all operations are broken off. I am acquainted with a Chinese who tried no less than thirteen before he succeeded in obtaining a k'eng-t'ieh that tallied with his own. See Note 72; also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. I., p. 65; Vol. II., p. 345.

59. k'ou-chun-ti 口占的. Kang-hsi, the second Emperor of the present dynasty, ordered his minister 張南華, who was skilled in versification, to improvise on t'ang-t'uan 湯圓, a pudding in soup; he 口占云, improvised or repeated impromptu:—

"Both the sweet and the white it is able to take,
Whether floating or sinking it never will shake."

These two lines shew that whatever his skill as a verse maker may have been, he was a clever courtier.

60. k'ou-ch'ü 口氣. A girl wrote a poem; among the verses were the two lines:—

葉送往來風

"The branch welcomes the birds of north and south,
The leaves accompany the coming and going wind."

Her father seeing these was very angry because 口氣不好, the sentiments were not good. This girl afterwards became 名妓, a celebrated courtesan.

61. kuan-kao 官誥. This is a sort of patent bestowed by the Emperor on deserving mandarins, containing words of praise to their ancestors, or wives; a 1st grade has four; 2nd and 3rd, three; 4th and 5th, two, and the 6th and 7th, likewise two. These patents are also called kao-ming 誥命, and for the 6th and 7th grades ch'ih-ming 勅命.

62. kuan<sup>1</sup>-mo<sup>4</sup> 關脈. A Chinese doctor feels the pulse on either wrist, according to circumstances, with three fingers; the first, 寸脈, he puts on the patient's left wrist near the thumb, in cases of heart disease; the second, 關脈, just above, for liver complaints; the third, 尺脈, just above that, for any affection of the kidneys. On the right wrist, in a similar manner, the first finger for spleen, the second for disorders of the stomach, and the third for pulmonic complaints, heat of body, etc.
65. liu<sup>2</sup>-chüeh<sup>3</sup> 留訣. Parting words, last dying injunctions, last words on proceeding on a journey, etc., whether written or oral, in prose or rhyme. A celebrated poet named Tu<sup>4</sup> Mu<sup>4</sup> 杜牧 fell in love with a fair girl in Hu-chou, but he was compelled by duty to go to a distant province. On parting from her he said 吾不十年必守此郡。十年不來乃從爾所適也。 "Within ten years I shall govern this province; if I do not come within the ten years, then you can marry whom you please." For some cause he did not return till the expiration of fourteen years, and found the lady had been married three years, and was blessed with three children. Tu Mu was much grieved at this and wrote the following:—

自 是 尋 春 去 較 遲
不 須 惆 悵 怨 芳 時
狂 風 落 盡 深 紅 色
綠 葉 成 陰 子 滿 枝

"From this being the case, I sought the spring too late;
Yet should I not grieve for the past fragrant hours,
The fierce wind has blown down all the deep red blossoms.
The green leaves form a shade, and the branches are full of fruit."

66. lo<sup>2</sup>-han<sup>4</sup> 羅漢. These deities, eighteen in number, are the attendants of Kuan<sup>2</sup>-yin<sup>1</sup> 觀音, the goddess of mercy. Some temples even contain as many as five hundred.
67. lo<sup>2</sup>-wên<sup>2</sup> 羅紋. The impress of the finger used as a signature for deeds of divorce, etc.; this is done by dipping the tip of the finger in ink and stamping it on the paper, leaving the impression of the grain of the finger; a signature of great importance in China, forgery of it being impossible. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. II., p. 209.
68. lu<sup>4</sup>-shih<sup>1</sup> 戮尸. Should a prisoner under sentence of death die in prison, his corpse is supposed to be beheaded; occasionally, however, that is omitted, and the lid of his coffin is slashed with a knife instead.
69. mi<sup>2</sup>-yüeh<sup>1</sup> 彌月. When an infant has lived a full month, his head is shaved for the first time; presents are made to it, friends are invited to witness the ceremony, and regaled according to the means of the host, and the day is kept as a feast. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. I, p. 122.

70. ming<sup>2</sup>-ching<sup>1</sup> 銘旌. This flag has the possessor's name on it. It may be bestowed on a minister for loyalty, on children for obedience and respect to their parents, on a woman for fidelity, chastity, etc.
71. pa<sup>1</sup>-hsien<sup>1</sup> 八仙. These are named 呂洞賓, 漢鍾離, 何仙姑, 鐵拐李, 曹國舅, 藍彩和, 張果老, and 韓湘子. They are represented in numerous ways, in pictures, porcelain, wood, bronze, etc., and are held in great esteem by the Chinese.
72. pa<sup>1</sup>-ko<sup>1</sup>-tzū<sup>4</sup>-rh<sup>2</sup> 八個字兒. These are characters taken from the "ten stems" and "twelve branches" of the horary system, to represent (two for each) the year, month, day and hour of a person's birth. In matrimonial cases the use of them is indispensable in the interchange of kêng<sup>1</sup>-t'ieh<sup>1</sup> (see Note 58). Queer mistakes sometimes occur through changing the characters inadvertently or otherwise. In the 好逑傳, Shui-ping-hsin a beautiful yet clever girl, to avoid the persecutions of Kao-kung-tzū, when her kêng-t'ieh is sent for, dexterously transfers the eight characters representing her cousin's birthday in place of her own, and by this means not only saves herself from being married to a man she dislikes, but causes her cousin to be married to him instead. See 好逑傳 Chap. 3. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. I, p. 65; Vol. II., p. 345.
74. pa<sup>4</sup>-miao<sup>4</sup> 拜廟. On a magistrate first taking charge of his office he should go to the local temple and worship; on the anniversary of any god's birthday that has received his title from government, and on the 1st and 15th of every month all the officers of the district should assemble at the temple to burn incense and worship. After the ceremony some portion of the "Sacred Edict" is read by an officer and commented on. See Note 48.
75. p'an<sup>2</sup>-ku<sup>3</sup> 盤古. The first Emperor of China. He was supposed to be created in darkness, and to understand how high is the heaven, and how deep is the earth. See also Wade's "T'ien lei," s. 10.
76. pi<sup>1</sup>-ming<sup>4</sup> 逼命. This formerly was of very common occurrence, and is sometimes done now. A Chinese of my acquaintance tells me he knows of a case where the father made his son starve himself to death. Daughters are made to hang or drown themselves for frailty, sons for undutifulness, wives for unfaithfulness, etc.
77. san<sup>1</sup>-pu<sup>4</sup>-ch'iu<sup>2</sup> 三不求. Three things not to be obtained, however much one may entreat or wish for them, ie, whiskers, a son, and wealth; the most remarkable is, that in speaking of them, whiskers or beard takes the precedence. Chinese if speaking of foreigners, outwardly ridicule their beards, but inwardly they have the greatest veneration for hirsute honours. See pictures of celebrated men, all, or nearly all have beards; go to a theatre, all the noted characters wear false beards, and a great part of their "bye play" is with the beard, stroking, or running their fingers through them, etc.; if an old man has the slightest pretension to one, he is perpetually combing, or otherwise fondling it. 出門不惹三子。老子, 小子, 瞎子。世上不求三難。好兒子一難。高壽二難。長鬚三難。 When travelling do not provoke the "three tzū," old men, boys, and the blind; in the world do not seek for the "three difficulties," first, a good son; second, longevity; third, a long beard. See 鋼經, Chap. 9. The proverb also says 三子不全, you cannot have all the three tzū, i. e., wealth, sons, and whiskers.

78. sung<sup>4</sup>-yu<sup>4</sup> 宋玉. 宋玉般貌, 子建般才. As handsome as Sung-yu, as clever as Ts'ao Tzū-chien 曹子建 (a very clever character of the 1st Han dynasty) is a common saying when speaking of the appearance, beauty, or abilities of a person. As we say "A perfect Adonis." Also 小生無宋玉般情. 潘安般貌. 子建般才. I had not the feeling of Sung-yu, the handsome face of P'an-an, or the cleverness of Tzū-chien. See 酌簡, Chap. 24. There seems some doubt as to which is the Adonis, Sung-yu or P'an-an.
79. sung<sup>4</sup>-kuei<sup>3</sup>-ti<sup>3</sup> 送鬼的. There are numerous ways of exorcising devils or spirits from a haunted house, etc. Supposing a child falls sick, this probably is attributed to the malevolence of a spirit; an exorcist is sent for to ascertain if any of the spirits have been disturbed; he chooses a day, takes 25 pieces of pork, 25 duck's eggs, 25 small fish, some wine, and offers them up; these with 25 strings of paper money and a straw boat are then forwarded to a place appointed by the exorcist; by these means the spirits are supposed to be pacified.
80. shih<sup>2</sup>-o<sup>4</sup>-pu<sup>4</sup>-shé<sup>4</sup> 十惡不赦. These are, —1. mou<sup>2</sup>-fan<sup>3</sup> 謀反. 2. mou<sup>2</sup>-ta<sup>4</sup>-ni<sup>4</sup> 謀大逆. 3. mon<sup>2</sup>-p'an<sup>3</sup> 謀叛. 4. o<sup>4</sup>-ni<sup>4</sup> 惡逆. 5. pu<sup>4</sup>-tao<sup>1</sup> 不道. 6. ta<sup>4</sup>-pu<sup>4</sup>-ching<sup>4</sup> 大不敬. 7. pu<sup>4</sup>-hsiao 不孝. 8. pu<sup>4</sup>-mu<sup>4</sup> 不睦. 9. pu<sup>4</sup>-i<sup>4</sup> 不義. 10. nei<sup>4</sup>-luan<sup>4</sup> 內亂. See 大清律例.
81. shu<sup>2</sup>-shên<sup>2</sup>-mo<sup>1</sup>-ti<sup>1</sup> 屬甚麼的. This in the north is equivalent to enquiring a person's age, and is very commonly used, for every Chinese knows what animal he was born under, and if a person replies "I belong to the Rat, Snake," etc., as the case may be, the enquirer can tell in a moment his age, or vice versa. Below I have arranged a table which shows how the "ten stems" and "twelve branches" work in the cycle; it also shows the names of the animals and the particular one a person belongs to, the age of, and the year he was born in, etc. This table is made for 1877, but it will require a little alteration every year in the figures representing a person's age only (the cycle characters, years, etc., never requiring altering), always commencing 1 from whatever year it may happen to be; the present year 1877 commencing 1, 1878 will have to commence with 1, 1879 same, and so on. The reader if he mixes much with Chinese will find this a great source of instruction and amusement.
82. shun<sup>4</sup>-fêng<sup>1</sup>-hsiang<sup>1</sup>-sung<sup>4</sup> 順風相送. Parting compliments to one who travels by water, equivalent to our "I wish you a pleasant journey." The four characters are generally placed at the stern of a vessel.
83. shí<sup>4</sup>-tê<sup>3</sup> 四德. These are 德, 言, 工, and 容, the virtues, speech, duties, and behaviour of a wife. She should be faithful to her husband, affable in speech, industrious in her household duties, and well behaved to all.
84. t'a<sup>2</sup>-t'ou<sup>2</sup>-tzi<sup>4</sup> 擡頭字. In letter writing it is customary when addressing equals or inferiors, to write the first or top character of each column level with that of the preceding one; this is called 平頭, "even top;" when writing the names, etc., of superiors, even though a column should not be completed, a fresh one is commenced, with one, two, or three characters raised above the level of the other columns, according to the rank or position of the person addressed; one character above is called 單擡頭; two, 雙擡頭, and three, 三擡頭; three is never exceeded.

85. t'ang<sup>2</sup>-érh<sup>2</sup>-ti<sup>1</sup>-ma<sup>2</sup> 鞦兒的馬. A t'ang is a raised ridge of earth, varying from 100 to 300 yards in length; on the top is a sort of gutter or track, along which horses are trained to gallop without being guided by reins while the riders discharge arrows at targets placed on either side. These horses command high prices amongst the native military, by whom they are much sought after.
86. t'ao<sup>1</sup>-hua<sup>1</sup>-yün<sup>1</sup> 桃花運. In casting the horoscopes of children, should one meet with this "peach blossom destiny" the general belief is, that, if a male child, he will become a prodigate; if a female, she will be a prostitute.
87. tiao<sup>4</sup> 吊. There seems to be no positive certainty as to the value of tiao; each place having their own particular one: for instance, in Peking and its neighbourhood a tiao is 50 large cash (當十的), or 500 small ones; in Niuchuang 160 cash, and at Shanghai 1,000. 一吊錢, a string of cash 1,000, 500, 50, as the case may be. Also used as 吊, to hang; to mourn, to condole, etc.
88. t'iao<sup>1</sup>-p'an<sup>1</sup>-hsien<sup>4</sup> 挑攀線, or fan<sup>1</sup>-hua<sup>1</sup>-hsien<sup>4</sup> 翻花線. This game is played in China exactly the same as it is played by children in England.
89. t'ien<sup>1</sup>-ch'iao<sup>2</sup> 天橋. "The Milky Way is a body of mist (or vapour) that has ascended from the earth to the skies. Its light shines brightly on the earth, and it looks like a river in the heavens."
90. t'ien<sup>1</sup>-kan<sup>1</sup> 天干. These are ten in number — ch'ia<sup>3</sup>, yi<sup>1</sup>, ping<sup>2</sup>, ting<sup>1</sup>, wu<sup>4</sup>, chi<sup>2</sup>, kêng<sup>1</sup>, hsin<sup>1</sup>, jên<sup>2</sup>, kwei<sup>2</sup> 甲乙丙丁戊己庚辛壬癸. For their uses in conjunction with "earth's branches" and the cycle see Notes 72 and 81. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. II., pp. 340-343.
91. ting<sup>4</sup>-ching<sup>1</sup> 定更. The Chinese night is divided into five watches:—

The 1st	begins about	9 P.M.	called	定更	or	更初
,, 2nd	,, ,,	11	,, ,,	二更
,, 3rd	,, ,,	1 A.M.	,, ,,	三更
,, 4th	,, ,,	3	,, ,,	四更
,, 5th	,, ,,	5	,, ,,	五更

The watches are arranged according to the length of the night, commencing earlier or later as the case may be.

92. t'u<sup>2</sup>-ti<sup>1</sup>-kung<sup>1</sup> 土地公, or 土地公公. The altar of this god differs from that of Ts'ai<sup>2</sup>-shên<sup>2</sup> 財神 (see Note 93), which is a permanency and generally fitted up in the interior of shops, while the one dedicated to 土地公 is only temporary, and is mostly placed by the side of the doors of private houses; it is simply a slip of red paper pasted on the wall with the above characters written on it, and a few incense sticks burning before it.
93. ts'ai<sup>2</sup>-shên<sup>2</sup> 財神. This god is greatly venerated in China, more so even than the great philosopher Confucius, "because he possesses the power of enriching those whom he likes." "He loves playthings." On the 5th day of the new year, before the recommencement of business, he is sacrificed to; this is called 接財神, "welcoming the wealth god." Other gods are sacrificed to with male fowls, but this one with hens, eggs, game, fireworks, etc.; the fish offered are a pair of 鯉魚, carps, but the name on this occasion is changed to 元寶魚 "silver ingot fish;" after sacrifice, some of these fish are released and put into a pond, or river, "that the business may be as profitable as the spawn of the carp is plentiful." In a merchant's house if persons employed by him are invited to the sacrificial ceremony, they will still be employed for the ensuing year; if not invited, they will be dismissed. Scarcely a shop that has not a small altar dedicated to this god. See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. II., p. 155

94. tsao<sup>4</sup>-chün<sup>1</sup> 竈君. This is purely a household god; almost every family having an altar on the stove dedicated to him. He cares for all the members of a family, and will report what they have done to 玉皇, the great Emperor in the day of the cycle 庚申. He is supposed annually to ascend to heaven on the 24th day of the 12th month; offerings are made on that day of rice, flour, puddings, fruits, and sugar, for "sugar will cause his mouth to stick so that he will not be able to report any bad actions of the family to 玉皇." Paper chairs are sold in quantities at this time "to assist him in ascending to heaven." "He returns to his duty on the 15th of the 1st month." See also "Social Life of the Chinese," Vol. II., p. 82.
95. wang<sup>2</sup>-pa<sup>1</sup> 王八. A sodomite; one guilty of unnatural crime. This is the commonest name for a tortoise, and the popular opinion of the Chinese is that they unnaturally propagate their species, consequently there could be scarcely a more insulting epithet than the above; tortoise roughly sketched on a wall or fence, with or without the characters, answers the purpose of our "commit no nuisance," but much more effectually; others write it wang<sup>1</sup>-pa<sup>2</sup> 忘八, "forget eight," i. e., 孝, 悌, 忠, 信, 禮, 義, 廉, 恥, filial piety, brotherly love, loyalty, truth, propriety, justice, generosity, and shame or "devoid of every good feeling" as we should say. A mandarin of high rank in the Ming dynasty, towards its close, when the country was overrun with rebels, surrendered to them; afterwards when the Ch'ing superseded the Ming dynasty, he served under them. A boy on one occasion presented him with a pair of couplet boards containing:—

一 二 三 四 五 六 七

leaving out the last character for shame (forgotten everything but shame).

96. wu<sup>3</sup>-t'ung<sup>2</sup>-shu<sup>4</sup> 梧桐樹. The wood of this tree, of which there are several varieties, is used greatly for making musical instruments; in intercalary years it is said to bear a leaf more than usual, and the fall of its leaf is the first harbinger of autumn. This tree is much admired by the Chinese; the popular idea being that its branches are the favourite resort of the phoenix. The proverb says:—

If you have not the Wu t'ung tree,
You cannot call the phoenix to come.

Another proverb says:—

梧桐一葉落

桐油 is the well known wood oil of commerce, and 桐油灰 is the common name for putty.

97. wu<sup>3</sup>-ch'ang<sup>2</sup> 五常. These are, jèn<sup>2</sup> 仁, i<sup>4</sup> 義, li<sup>3</sup> 禮, chih<sup>4</sup> 智 and hsin<sup>4</sup> 信, benevolence, righteousness, propriety, knowledge, and truth.

99. wu<sup>3</sup>-fu<sup>2</sup> 五福. All blessings, every blessing. The five blessings in the 書經 are 壽, 富, 康寧, 攸好德, and 考終命. Long life, wealth, tranquillity, desirous of virtue, and a natural death. See 書經 洪範. Others say longevity, riches, honour, posterity, and a natural death. In fact if one asks half-a-dozen Chinese what the “five blessings” are, each one will probably give a different list, perhaps the particular blessings he himself wishes for.
100. wu<sup>2</sup>-hsing<sup>2</sup> 五刑. The “古五刑” ancient five punishments were, to brand the face, cut off the nose, cut off the feet, castration, and death. The 今五刑 modern five punishments are 斬, 絞, 流, 徒 and 笞, beheading, strangling, transportation, banishment, and bambooning.
101. wu<sup>2</sup>-kuan<sup>1</sup> 五官. These are 耳, 目, 口, 鼻 and 眉, ears, eyes, mouth, nose, and eyebrows. Some Chinese, however, assert that the heart is the fifth sense. Also a title of the official who superintends the imperial almanack.
102. wu<sup>2</sup>-lin<sup>2</sup> 五倫. These are 君臣, 父子, 夫婦, 昆弟 and 朋友, prince and minister, father and son, husband and wife, elder and younger brothers, and friends.
103. wu<sup>2</sup>-tai<sup>1</sup> 五代. Grandfather, father, one's self, son, and grandson.
104. ying<sup>2</sup>-ch'ün<sup>1</sup> 迎春. At the “welcoming spring” all the local magistrates with their escorts go in procession carrying a gaudily painted image of a cow—each color is symbolical; if yellow predominates, the crops will be plentiful; red, conflagrations will take place; white, floods; black, sickness; and blue, war. This is followed by the god 太歲, who, if bare headed, is symbolical of heat; with the cap on, cold; if he wear shoes, much rain; barefooted, dry weather. The procession marches to the eastward to receive the Spring and returns to the local god's temple to worship, each official afterwards going to his own office. At the magistrate's office a dinner has been prepared called 春宴, “the spring banquet;” this, after the magistrate has dined, is taken by the people. Theatricals and merrymaking also take place.
